

Bylaws in fraction creates pep controversy

by Mark Kaenel

Although there were constitutional violations during the selection of next year's pep squad, results announced two weeks ago will stand as final.

This decision was made by Harold Kinser vice principal, last week.

Many reports came to the Eagle's Eye from students who tried out for pep squad, expressing their discontent of the judging during try-outs. The judging and selection were indeed in violation of Article XXI of the student body constitution. It states that all cheerleaders "shall be chosen by a committee of a minimum of six varsity cheerleaders from different schools." It also states that three more groups of six students each (from different schools) will judge and select song-leaders, flag twirlers and the mascot.

"There was a violation of the constitution," Kinser said. He met with Superintendent Robert Williams, next year's pep squad adviser Dennis Wortham, and this year's pep squad adviser Betty Hughbanks. After the meeting, Kinser decided that "the proper decision was to let the decision (the announced results) stand." Actual judges, according to some contestants, included Wortham, Hughbanks, varsity cheerleader Liz Hughbanks, and two Colton High School students, all of whom are ineligible, according to the constitution. Kinser felt that all the girls had an equal opportunity and that the judging was performed "professionally, equitably and fairly." He also noted that this was "probably one of the most rigid try-outs we've ever had."

Kinser said he would like to see the number of judges required, to be lower, adding that it is very difficult to get the required 24 judges. "I will bend some arms to get the constitution changed," said Kinser.

Wortham agreed with Kinser that the number of judges is too high but added that he would operate next year's try-outs according to the constitutional guidelines. Wortham said he was not aware of the constitutional regulations and blamed this on his "receiving a lack of information." He added that the judging was done fairly and that the judges were qualified to do the judging. Wortham noted that if the try-outs were conducted again, "we would get the same results." Both Kinser and Wortham noted that the results were almost exactly the same as the preliminary ratings which was done by a clerical staff earlier.

There was also a report that one who tried out, who prefers to remain nameless, did not meet the grade point requirement as set forth by the pep squad by-laws. Kinser assured that he "personally checked" all of the contestants' grades. One girl was disqualified, however, because she received an "F" on her last report card, which is not allowed prior to try-outs.

The squad which was announced two weeks ago, will stand as final. Next year's varsity cheerleaders will be Kim Buckland, Sherry Gregory, Jill King, Marcia McAfee, Chris O'Connor and Doria Rahier. Junior varsity cheerleaders include Robin Moore, Kim Claygon, Shaunna Embry, Lori Smith, Kristi Hoff and Mary Busch.

Next year's poms will be Debbie Crawford, Michelle Young, Melinda Mejia, Kari Reise, Karen Roecker, Cynthia Corona and Juana Burns. Flags include Annette Theodorou, Karen Ratliff, Erika Duran, Cissy Gonzales, Shannon Casey and Jeanine Gonzales.

Calderon plans rescue mission

by Dino Pantoni

One of Ike's Spanish teachers, Grace Calderon, who fled Communist Cuba 18 years ago, hopes for a chance to go Cuba in the near future and bring her seven immediate relatives back to the United States safely and legally.

If she gets the chance, Calderon will go to Cuba by boat. "There would be a lot of risks involved," she said. "Risks, such as going to Cuba and not bringing back my whole family." She explained, "I have a friend in Miami, whose family is also in Cuba. He went there and only brought three family members back out of 11. Plus 15 other Cubans that he didn't even know. The other Cubans that you may bring back with you, could be murderers, thieves and other Castro's not-wants," Calderon stated. Calderon, who has been trying to contact her family in Cuba for three weeks, said she has not yet reached her relatives. "However my friend in Central America, in El Salvador, did reach them, immediately, she said. "And they do want to live in a democracy, to be free."

Calderon explained that she has to get a navigator to take her from Key West, Florida to Cuba. "It costs $1,000 per family member to bring them back to the U.S.," she said. "That's not the problem. I must have a boat and a navigator."

She calls the mission to Cuba "Mission Impossible." This is because "when you get to Cuba you have to go through the Immigration office, which it may take weeks."

When asked about President Carter's policy on the Cuban refugees, Calderon said, "I think this could be improved, if the U.S. government states very firmly that they will accept the legal, political refugees with relatives living in the USA, who in turn, sign an affidavit of support."

"They must have freedom, and they are going to get it legally," she added. Calderon told a recent telethon organized by Cubans in the U.S. which raised $2,000,000 million. "Even the old ladies donated money because it was a dollar towards freedom and democracy," she said. "It was a great success. For once, all the Cubans were united."

Calderon asks everyone to pray for her and others in Cuba, so that the "Mission Impossible will be accomplished."

Sweets banned from campus

You had better get your fill or Hostess Twinkies, Big Stick popsicles and fruit punch because you won't see these products here next year.

This is all because of a regulation brought about by the Department of Agriculture.

The regulation states that schools participating in the national breakfast and lunch program cannot sell, while school is in session, non-nutritional foods.

This means any food "with less than 5% of the USRDA requirements for each of eight specified nutrients per 100 calories and per serving."

This regulation, which has been adopted by the California Association Directors of Activities (CADA), must be implemented no later than July 1, 1980.

Harold Kinser, Ike vice principal, said that he received this information from the business office.

He stated that this will affect the cafeteria, the vending machines in the locker rooms, and the sucker sales by the clubs

Assistant superintendent in charge of business Jane Scott said that she "was not ready to be interviewed" since the school board has not made its decision about how to enforce the regulation.

Kinser said that the selling of fruits could be a possibility in the cafeteria to offset the new regulation.

They are also watching surrounding school districts to see how they are going to handle this subject.

Comp scores due soon

Results for the competency tests taken during the last part of April will be in during the last week in May, according to Helen Dollahan, assistant principal.

When questioned about which portions of the tests students find hard to pass, Dollahan answered, "The math, English objective and the paragraph."

Are competency classes offered at Ike benefiting the students?

"I hope so," answered Dollahan. "They must be. We're trying to give as many chances as possible."

In accordance to California state law, all students beginning with the class of '81, must pass the competency test to graduate. However, if you move to another school district, you may have to take the competency test over even though you passed it at Ike. This is because each school district has its own test that parents and school faculty members devise.

Gilyard plans to 'gain respect' on campus

Student body president-elect Reggie Gilyard plans to work in union with his student council next year and doesn't foresee making any drastic changes within the council "until I see what I have to work with," he said last week.

He said his first job will be to "gain respect" of the council. Gilyard was elected student body president last month by defeating Renee Bracamonte.

Although Gilyard admits that he "really doesn't know what to expect," he added that getting to know the council, adviser and the new principal should be no problem.

"Personally, I have nothing (new) scheduled," commented Gilyard, adding that he would rather start off with the basic activities before initiating new programs.

The president-elect said he would like to officiate the council meetings "formally," adding that in the past order during the meetings is not always respected. "It will get more casual toward second quarter," encouraged Gilyard.

He said he has no idea who the new student council adviser will be next year, but said that he has heard rumors that Paula Malody, Roger Reupert and Harry Rader could be possible candidates for the position. Gilyard noted that the main qualities of the new adviser should be helpful and dedicated. He does not think he will participate in the selection of the new adviser, though. "It doesn't make any difference," said Gilyard, "whether the adviser was a striker or a non-striker."

Gilyard has had some leadership experience. He was student body president at Frisbie Junior High when he was in ninth grade. He is Key Club president this year and was in CSF during his first semester as a sophomore. He will attend Boy's State in Sacramento during June where he will learn more leadership qualities.

Gilyard is optimistic as far as student council for next year is concerned. "I don't think we'll have any problems next year," he concluded.

New EE staff chooses L-o-n-g as 'head chief'

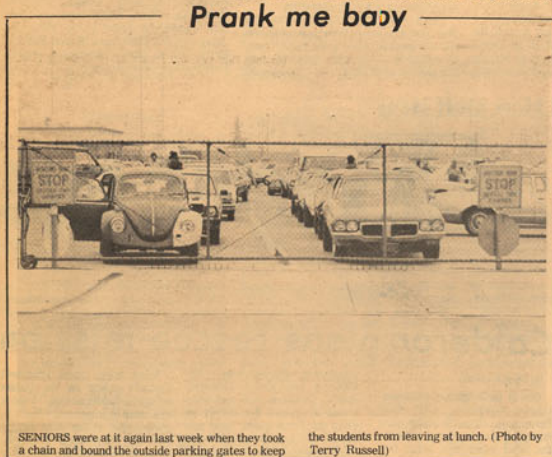

A new Eagle's Eye staff has been selected for the 1980-81 school year.

Other new staff members selected by senior staff members this year are Dino Pantoni, assistant news editor; Tom Martin, assistant editorial editor; Angie Russo, assistant features editor; Ricky Nell, assistant sports editor and advertising manager; Sandy Krueger, business editor and advertising assistant; Terry Russell, head photographer; and Terry Sherlock, photographer.

Long and Carranza have been on the staff this year as sports editor and assistant features editor, respectively. All other new staff members have completed one year of beginning journalism.

News briefs

Morse plans no 'drastic changes' for next year

"I wasn't hired as a change person."

That was the statement made by Ike's newly appointed principal, Bruce Albert Morse, when he was on campus last week to meet with the faculty. He explained that he did not intend to make "drastic changes" at Eisenhower next year.

Morse said he had been impressed by many of the kids he had already met at Ike. "I'm looking forward to coming on July 1 full time," he said.

He also noted that his job will be to help students. Morse said the district was pleased with Eisenhower, at least, from the impression it gave him.

Morse liked the idea of a single lunch. "I do think your days are too long, though," he added.

Though he would not discuss any, as he put it, "strategies" involving the rift between strikers and non-strikers, Morse said he was "...gonna have it out in the open..." He said the problem was communication, or lack of it.

Ike grads party

If you notice there are a number of people absent today, don't worry!

There's not an epidemic going around! Most of the "absences" will be in the senior class as they participate in an "unofficial senior ditch day," a self-made tradition at Eisenhower.

Many are heading for the beaches and various places while some will just "kick-back" at home and enjoy a 4-day weekend since Monday is a holiday for Memorial Day.

Memorial Day was originally known as Decoration Day when it was introduced by Grand Army of the Republic General John A. Logan on May 30, 1868.

The original idea was to honor those who died in the Civil War, but it now honors all men who have died for the United States in all wars.

Rialto to host

Two families from Rialto have agreed to accept foreign exchange students for next fall, according to Mrs. Robert Nelson, president of the adult chapter of AFS and one who has invited a student to live in her home.

Five years ago the Nelsons also had a foreign exchange student with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Anderson have also opened their home to a student for next year.

Although there are six openings for EHS students to become exchange students in other countries next year, no one has applied, according to Mrs. Nelson. She said applications received within the next two weeks could still be considered. More information may be obtained by calling her at 875-7927.

Baby arrives

Thirteen days ahead of schedule, like English teacher, Carole Scambray was blessed with her first child, a baby boy.

Vincent Scambray was born May 6, weighing 5 pounds and thirteen ounces.

Photos burn

This year's prom was indeed a "hot" night for many, but not enough to cause a fire?

Well, not at the Marriott Hotel itself, but the Alfred & Fabris Studio in Los Angeles went ablaze...along with half of the prom pictures!

"I couldn't believe it!" says junior class president Sharon Smith when she found her name among the many Eisenhower students on the list of pictures that were burned. "Almost all my friends' pictures were burned!" she said.

"It was my senior prom and I wanted something to remember it by," says another disappointed victim, Kelly Knowles.

To make up for the loss, the studio will refund the money and print a 5 x 7 picture if a snapshot negative is sent in.

But this isn't enough for senior Barry Ruderman. He has been consulting attorneys on legal action that can be taken. "I wasn't so disappointed for myself, but all my friends..." says Ruderman.

As to whether or not he will actually sue the company, he says he has "other alternatives" to handle this case.

Highest honors awarded to seniors

Elizabeth Hughbanks, Darcy Johnson, Jessica Juarez, Shari Kiefer, Ann Levinson, Denise Lindsay and Lisa Massaro.

Also Connie Munson, Terri Norton, Corinne Nunez, Christine Osberg, Susan Paul, Melanie Peterson, Karen Pickard, Julie Potter, Suzanne Rehm, Lauron Richmond, Victoria Rosold, Jacquelin Schatz, Shawn Smith, Debra Suchodolski, Lori Tyler and Kathryn Yount.

Editor wins $300

For the third year in a row Eisenhower journalists have won scholarships in a competition sponsored by the Sun in San Bernardino.

Eagle's Eye editor Darryl Delgado was first runner-up this year and won a $300 scholarship. He competed with top journalists from throughout San Bernardino County.

Last year Sandy Merritt, Eagle's Eye editor, also was first runner-up, and the year before that Eagle's Eye features editor, Jim Hippenstiel won first.

Delgado plans to major in journalism at Cal State University in Sacramento.

honors include Eric Andrist, Shahriar Banihashemi, Bill Dang, Vincent Dorsey, Guillermo Flores, James Goodwin, Mark Kaanel, Vincent Kasperick, Alexander Leon, Richard Neri, Cedric Pasqua, Barry Ruderman, Clyde Summers and David Wadleigh.

A total of 144 seniors will be graduating with honors, having a GPA of between 3.0 and 3.49. Their names will be included in the next issue of the paper.

Hawaii to be retirement home for teacher, counselor Dowd

by Beverly Hobbs

After 30 years of counseling and teaching, John Dowd will retire this June.

Dowd left San Bernardino High to coach basketball at Ike, in 1959. That year he was also chairperson of the P.E. department, biology teacher and in charge of all student government at Ike.

He coached until 1965 when he decided to become a full-time counselor in order to have "a more personal contact with students."

Dowd said he was the "first and only coach" so far at Ike to lead a basketball team to the CIF semi-finals and score well over 100 points.

He has seen many changes take place at Ike, especially with the students. "I remember when the stands at our games were just packed," he said, "even when we had to share gyms before with Pacific and San Bernardino High."

"Now there's just a handful," he added. Dowd said he will be moving to Hawaii this summer to an ocean front condominium to be near his children.

"I will very much miss Eisenhower," exclaimed Dowd, "especially my association with the staff and students."

SURF'S UP for John Dowd as he thinks of his retirement to the Hawaiian Islands.

Rookie staff needs mercy on first attempt by Jim Raymond (Member of this year's Eagle's Eye Staff)

Forgive us, Eisenhower. We know not what we do.

We've thrown the new bright-eyed and bushy-tailed 1980-81 Eagle's Eye staff to the lions. Babes to the woods, so to speak.

Students of Eisenhower, I have a plea to make. Have mercy on these rookies. As you page through this... this... jumbled mass of media malnutrition, just think back in the year. Think of all those excellent examples of journalistic finesse you were able to grasp and luck away in your hungry, educated brains.

But really, take it easy on them. Don't criticize their first effort right to their faces. How are you going to feel when their eyes begin to well up with tears? Keep in mind that we're dealing with sensitive little motor-scooters here. If we do anything drastic, they're liable to throw down their typewriters and storm out of the room.

Yes, I know you're used to a totally outstanding newspaper every two weeks, but give them about six years, and they might climb back up to the level we achieved this year. Oh sure, we have to teach them a few things, like not to hide under the tables when Mr. Bailey comes in to have a friendly off-the-record discussion, and how not to write stories insinuating that everyone in the Navy is gay. How not to slip dirty words into stories so every elementary school principal in Rialto writes mean nasty letters to you. How not to write one-sided strike issues. Little things that are necessary for staff survival. Things that this year's staff would never do.

Maybe they'll do O.K. With the literary wisdom we've passed on to them, maybe they'll make it O.K. I'm just glad I won't be around to watch them go through the proverbial school of hard knocks. It hurts so much!

Who's Who with students

A total of 43 percent of America's Who's Who among high school students have never once had a beer.

Although this may seem shocking to the average EHS student, it's true, according to a recent Who's who survey.

The nation's outstanding high school students—those who are better than average in academics, athletics, community and school activities also fit into these statistics:

- 92% have not smoked marijuana
- 85 percent are members of an organized religion
- 85% prefer traditional marriage
- 78% have not had sexual intercourse
- 70% have a definite career goal in mind
- 24% would volunteer for the military
- 62% plan to be a virgin when they marry

Catching women -one hazard of driving a Baja bug

On a typical Eisenhower day there are approximately 30 to 35 Volkswagens parked in or around school. And you're probably asking yourself why so many students drive this small imported car...right?

Maybe it's because they're not really expensive to begin with and possibly with a little time and money you could have a good-looking, economical car.

Take for example the large selection of Baja Bugs ranging in color from white to black. "They're great for around town cruising and always tend to rough it out in the sand dunes," comments Jeff Henshaw, sophomore, who owns a sporty brown Baja Bug.

Then there's the bug with a Porsche paint job and those expensive center lines known as the "California Bug."

With a real nice bug you can "catch women" easily, claims Tom Hubbard, senior, who is in the process of fixing up a California Bug of his own. In his opinion "the California Bug looks and performs better than the Baja Bug."

But, no matter which one you prefer, there are many V.W. parts in places to accommodate your needs.

Wilder stocks '70 challenger super car

Some of the things it boasts are a 383 Chrysler engine, a quadrijet carburetor, two corvair turbo charged mufflers and a 84 rear end.

It also has a stock manifold, a small cam shaft and center lines with T A radiata.

Besides the Challenger, they also own a yellow 1970 Cuda.

Many things it boasts are a 440 Magnum engine, a Hurst four-speed shifter, two 4500 Dominators, a Dana rear end, and four turbo charged mufflers. Wilder said they get most of their equipment from J & M Speed Center.

Much work must be done to a car which has "five grand in the engine."

"Sometimes me and my dad work on them and other times I work on them by myself," he explained.

"We have to change the spark plugs, oil, and Dyno tune it out," he said.

'I was into the drug scene for 2 1/2 years'

by Jenny Rogers

By appearance alone you could never tell the young girl sitting on the stage is a "Beverly Hills brat" nor a reformed drug addict. She's clad in faded patched-levis, Nike running shoes and wears a smile that somehow seems all too familiar.

She is Carrie Hamilton, 16-year-old daughter of producer Joe Hamilton and T.V. personality Carol Burnett. Hence, the toothy grin. Carrie is sharing her story with a group of student reporters at a recent SCJEA write-off at Alhambra High School in Los Angeles. "I was into the drug scene for 2 1/2 years...I've done everything from pot to quaaludes to mescaline...towards the end I was spending $3500 a week on drugs. I had gotten myself about $400 into debt. I was doin' things I never thought I would for money," she begins.

Carrie had been through five O.D.'s, three psychiatrists, two physicians and nothing changed. In desperation Carrie's parents decided to try the Palmer Drug Abuse Program (PDAP). If that didn't work, a mental institution was next on the list.

Much against her will Carrie was sent to the PDAP center in Houston, Texas. Those six months in Houston gave Carrie a soft Texan drawl, weaned her from drugs and changed her entire outlook on life.

PDAP is based on the principle of ex-addicts helping other addicts on their long journey to sobriety. The program is similar to Alcoholics Anonymous in many ways. AA's famous 12 steps are used substituting the words "mind-changing chemical" for alcohol. The abusers physical dependence on drugs is directed towards an emotional dependence on a higher being, God. Group peer counseling is another major factor in the program. Perhaps the single most important trait the two programs have in common is they are successful.

Carrie also denies that her mother's career or her Beverly Hills upbringing had anything to do with her drug problem. "She's a mom, a real mom. She's always cared about me. She's never did like me when I got high, but she never stopped loving me. She loved me enough to let me hate her for awhile. I hated her for sending me to Houston," she said.

Despite the fact that God is mentioned frequently, both Carrie and PDAP counselor Archer Simms deny that the program was a religious experience or a spiritual awakening. But both Carrie and Simms admitted that one time they were both "Jesus Freaks."

Carrie described her condition when she arrived at PDAP. "I'm 5'8" and I weighed 90 pounds. I had a greenish complexion...kinds like the walking dead."

She's come a long way since those first days in Houston. Physically she is the picture of health and vitality, emotionally stable. Carrie says, "My relationship with my parents is better than I ever thought it could be...This is the first time since I was 13 that I found any kind of happiness."

Dangling on a string around her neck is a symbol of her achievements. To the untrained observer it is only a small bead but to PDAP members it signifies a period of sobriety. Carrie's brown bead stands for ten months and Archer Simms' white bead symbolizes three years of being free from drugs.

The program was criticized on a recent 60 Minutes segment. The show charged PDAP with using brainwashing techniques to get abusers off drugs. To this, Carrie replied, "When I went in I didn't have to sign anything. I didn't pay any money. They didn't even have to know my last name. Nobody ever put electrodes on my head and said, 'This is what you're gonna say and this is what your gonna do.'"

One of the first things Carrie found out in the program is that she needed friends, real friends who would "love and support me unconditionally," she explained. She also found out that not many of her old partying friends fit into that category.

"As soon as I quit gettin' high about half my friends turned their backs on me...gave me the finger and said 'We don't want you anymore.'"

When asked if she was ever tempted to get high, she answered, "All the time. When I'm playin' pinball, guys and girls will come up to me and say 'Wanna get high?' I tell them no. If I could get high without all the hassles I would in a minute. You get in a bad place and the first thing you think of is gettin' high. It's the easiest escape I know. But it changes me and I don't like those consequences," she added.

Ghosts spook their way into mortal lives

by Angie Russo
Kristen Nicholson

"Ghosts? No way! Ghosts are for haunted houses on Halloween, not in May!"

"The question of 'Are ghosts for real?' has been asked over and over with the majority of people answering, "No way!"

A malevolent ghost is one who tries to do harm. It is usually a person that was murdered or hurt by relatives. Such a ghost will try to reveal the murderer or hurt him in some way. These ghosts haunt houses. You know, strange noises from the attic, moving furniture, skeletons, the whole bit!

In spite of how silly ghosts may seem, some people do believe in the existence of supernatural beings. They have even had some experiences with them.

Le Saulsbury, social studies teacher, shared a ghost tale that he has been experienced in his family.

Saulsbury's great-grandmother lived in a house that has previously been the murder site of a young man. The house was thus considered haunted. According to Saulsbury, the "pots and pans would clang" at night in the kitchen. But the real fright came from the man upstairs in the bedroom, an unknown, magical "man" who would appear in the closet, then gradually become smaller as he vanished into the back of what seemed like an endless closet!

This man wasn't the only magical being in the house either. There was also an unknown cat who could run through walls and furniture!! Not around them, but through!

As to whether or not this story is true, Saulsbury doesn't know, but he believes in such supernatural things to the extent that "there's definitely something.....energy or something!"

Another recount of a spirit was with Eisenhower student Kevin Reynolds. In February 1973, Kevin's father left for an exercise class at the Eisenhower gym. Kevin went to bed around 9:00 and during the night experienced two dreams.

In the first dream, Kevin dreamed he saw his father's truck crash into a curb. He saw his father bent over the steering wheel.

In the second dream, he was in his room when he saw a light in the living room on. He went in the living room and his mother and grandparents were up. They told him his father was killed.

Then he woke up and the light was on in the living room! Kevin knew what had happened. He went in the room and his mother and grandparents were there. They told him his father had had a blood clot burst which caused him to immediately pass out and roll into a curb.

Two weeks after his father was killed, Kevin was in his room getting ready for bed. The door connecting his room to the garage opened and his light was flipped on. His father appeared in the doorway.

His father walked in and Kevin asked his father what he wanted. He just said he wanted to talk. He sat down on Kevin's bed and asked how Kevin's mother and sister were. Kevin said they were fine. Then the father told Kevin he was the man of the house and not to let anything happen to his mother or sister.

Kevin asked his father why he had to leave and he answered, "It was just time to go home." Kevin began to cry and hugged his father. Then his father left.

The topic of the supernatural has been the basis of many books and movies, both fiction and non-fiction. "The Amityville Horror," the story of a family's life in a haunted house, has been a controversial flick in which investigators are trying to prove that the story is a hoax.

The stories of such strange and abnormal things are many. The reality of these depend on each individual's beliefs and experiences.

But just to be on the safe side, maybe you should check in the closet before you go to bed tonight.

Counselor Kuiper visits Jimmy at the White House

by Dino Pantoni

Joann Kuiper, like counselor, made a flying trip to Washington, D.C., last week to visit with the President of the United States, Jimmy Carter.

Although she didn't visit with the President personally, she did see him and his wife Roslyn and their daughter Amy.

The main purpose of her trip was to attend the inauguration of the new Department of Education that was initiated by the Carter administration.

Kuiper was one of ten educators chosen to represent California at the inauguration.

An estimated 750 educators from throughout the U.S. were guests at the service on the South Lawn of the White House. She received her invitation on Wednesday, left on Thursday and returned to Rialto on the weekend.

She said Carter took pride in establishing the Department of Education. She also said the new Secretary of Education Hufschneider wants to combine all 142 education agencies into one. "So you will not have to go through all those agencies to obtain information," she explained.

"The Secretary wants just another bureaucracy but a working department without all the paper work," she added.

"This in turn would provide a better education for the students of this nation."

Kuiper also attended the "Salute to Learning" at the DAR Constitution Hall. This program included such guests as a noted concert pianist; Robert Merrill, a Metropolitan opera singer;

Loretta Lynn, a famous country singer; the President and his family, and the Secretary of Education.

The three special guests presented plaques to teachers who had helped them in their schooling years to grow in knowledge and in learning.

Afterwards the guests were invited back to the White House by Mrs. Carter. Kuiper is active in the local, state and national teacher organizations. She has also campaigned for Carter and Mondale.

Sen-tetts to sponsor Hoe Down May 31

The country atmosphere, and aroma of sweet hay in the air may lead one to believe they've stumbled into a scene from Hee Haw. Hopefully they'll be dressed for the occasion when the Sen-tetts present their first Country Hoe-Down dance.

The Hoe-Down will be May 31 from 8 to 12 p.m. in Eisenhower's cafeteria. The dance theme will be country style with a band producing live music. Contrary to an article printed in the previous issue of Eagle's Eye the band will not be playing country music. Refreshments will be served and pictures are available. "We'll have a photographer there to take pictures, which is good for the people whose prom pictures were burned," commented Carolyn Woods, president of Sen-tetts.

Tickets went on sale this week in the ASB ticket window and will continue until May 30. Price is $6.50 per couple.

In the past the Sen-tetts have put on a Spring Fever dance. "One of the reasons we changed the theme from Spring Fever to a Country Hoe-down is to inspire more people to come," commented Woods. "People seem to lose interest in school towards the end of the year, especially after the prom. I hope the Hoe-Down will become something to look forward to annually as school ends," she added.

Another reason the Sen-tetts decided on a country theme is "It's inexpensive," We replied. "Blue jeans, an old shirt and cowboy hat are pretty cheap and easy to find."

"Since our dance follows the prom most students don't have the money to spend on an outfit," she added.

The Hoe-Down will be a girl-ask-guy dance. "It's a lot easier for a guy to forget to ask a girl to a dance, but it's hard to say no," explained Woods. "All in all, the dance should run pretty smooth. The only problem I foresee is controlling people coming in and out because the restrooms are outside," she explained.

Like the outdoors? Be a 6th grade camp counselor

by Barbara Dowling

How many of you remember going to 6th grade camp?

How many of you had a time worth remembering?

Students from Eisenhower through the vocational education program are getting the opportunity to relive their encounters of the sixth grade year-end anticipation...only from the "authoritative view" as camp counselor.

Several EHS students have volunteered to experience Camp Sealy in Crestline during the school week (teachers permitting, of course). Each 3-day session about six students are transposed into counselors and left in the hills.

"When you are a 'little kid' at camp that's exactly what you are. You bring your environment with you and people revolve around you.

When you are a counselor at camp you are someone different to each individual. You are planted there, created by an entourage with which you must identify. You are an author of respect; what you give you will receive. This requires the authority of friendship and caring. You just help yourself. It becomes a chronic case.

Authority: something you must remember as the lights go off at "9 p.m. sharp" (even though the chitter chatter is engaged into the night). It is an envy of their epidemic of enthusiasm, their ability to unknowingly capture you, but also how the heck they can stay awake when you're more than ready to drop dead!

But, you can be proud! Why, just in a few hours you've learned 50 names, killed the black widow in the showers, changed your socks six times, and are now ready for the evening hike. Ahh, togetherness!

Did you know that some trees swell up when they are stung by a wasp? That you're not allowed to chew gum in class, and yes, kids still fall in love with their counselors!

Creativity is something you need not worry about. If you have none, you can borrow some of the kids'. Your kids...through every cabin inspection, every uphill hike, every piece of soggy toilet, and bluffs. "Tired? ME?"

It's evident (or love) as tears drip one by one saying goodbye to each, one by one. It will be something you'll never forget. So pack your mittens (and your heart). There is one more session, May 27-29. Counselors are needed. Contact Helen Little, in the job placement center.

Ike shop teacher really makes time with his clock

Roland Hoepfner, woodshop teacher, has been in the process of building a clock for 1 1/2 years.

The reason that it is taking him so long is because it is a 6'00" tall grandfather clock made completely out of wood.

Hoepfner explained, "I've been working on it off and on and I didn't even work on it last summer.

It all started one day when he was looking through "Fine Woodworking" magazine.

It told of how to build a grandfather clock out of wood. "I sent for the plans," Hoepfner said. The plans cost $5. "I bought the materials for the $60," he added.

From these plans "I formed my own idea and produced my own clock," he said.

The task of sanding, filing the wheels and teeth perfectly round took eight hours each.

The pendulum is a completely round piece of wood and also took a considerable amount of time to accomplish.

The bearings, bushings, and teeth are lubricated with graphite. When finished the clock will be almost completely made out of wood, have an accuracy of 4 seconds a week, and will have a store value of $3,000.

He said he may have it together for the art show even though it may not be running. "Perseverance, patience, and accuracy" were the keys to completing this project, said Hoepfner.

Anybody faint in Ike's bloody drive?

Some people will fall over to give blood. Or more appropriately...faint at the thought. Eisenhower students and faculty "caught the Eagle spirit" last Thursday in Ike's blood drive sponsored by the student council.

The blood is in Eisenhower's name at the San Bernardino and Riverside county blood bank. It can be used by students and faculty, their families, or anyone in need by contacting EHS student council or Susie Stewart, chairman of the blood drive.

From the past blood drive,

Eisenhower accepted 175 pints from donors. The total is now approximately 250 pints as there have been donations for emergencies and operations.

Spring football opens with positive note

by Jim Long

Spring football opened last week which the head coach Keith Bailey said was the most to come out in over four years. According to Bailey, he and his staff have been working with, up to 84 players, with a consistent rate of 75 players per practice.

Kevin Goodley and Steve Harris head up the competition at the quarterback position. Goodley, who started in the final game last season as a sophomore, and who got some time in other games, is said to have the first shot at the spot. Harris, said Bailey, has been "looking good in the spring."

Bailey said the team lacked size. "...(We) never have been big and we never will be. I don't foresee us getting much bigger."

But to make up for it, a veer offense, quite similar to that run at Pacific, will be used, the idea being to take advantage of the immense quickness that is available.

Ike plans to run a "50" defense, that is, five men on the line with two linebackers.

Bailey said, "I have five or six running backs who could start now." Receiving positions are also very deep, but the line isn't.

The coach said they don't have as many good players, "...we're just not as deep..." as they might need it.

Jocks move to college in pursuit of happiness

During the course of a school year several outstanding athletes surface on high school campuses across America.

Eisenhower is no exception. Here is a run-down on some of Ike's better athletes in each sport.

DARNELL COLES (football, baseball): Coles will either attend UCLA or a football scholarship or sign a pro baseball contract. The outcome will be known after the baseball draft June 3.

KELLY KNOWLES (volleyball, basketball, softball): Kelly will attend the University of New Mexico next year to play volleyball.

ALEX LEON (track): Leon will attend the University of California at Riverside in the fall on a regency scholarship. He will not run track.

DANNY COATES (football, wrestling): Coates has not made a final decision on where to attend school yet. However, he has three schools in mind. California State University at Fullerton, Golden West Junior College or Mt. San Antonio College. He will wrestle at the school he attends.

TIM NICHOLSON (tennis): Nicholson will be attending California State University, San Bernardino, next year. Cal State does not field athletic teams.

LIZ HUGHBANKS (swim team, diving team): Liz will be attending Riverside City College in the fall, where she will continue her diving.

MIKE CLARK (basketball): Clark will be attending San Bernardino Valley College where he will pursue his basketball career.

Next year depends on hard work

With only one victory this past year for the girls tennis team, things don't look bright for next year. But they could be very good, according to Lynn Cox, coach of the Ike tennis team. Cox stated that a lot of dedication and practice over the summer break could drastically help the girls tennis program here at Ike.

"I'd rather look at the men's tennis team as a cup half full of water instead of half empty," she said.

Mrs. Cox said, "After 13 years of school I just want to thank you for all of your encouragement and support with: Mrs. Rosa, Brownies-Cadets, 'Casey Bucks,' 6th grade camp, violin, 'South Pacific-Matchmaker,' Snow Homecoming Queen, vice prez, Parliamentarian, First Aid, CPR, English 'C', Hawaii, campaigns, video tapes, buttons, phoning, 365 Days of tears, J.C.P. "I know I've been one big bundle of ups and downs and have driven you up many a wall and ceiling. The graduate is usually given the merit, but I want to congratulate: Ms. Blanche Levinson for being the greatest mom, #1 parent! You never pushed me but only loved me. Mazeltov Love and Sunshine 'Daughter B' Ann Levinson

"It all depends on the individual work the girls give to tennis during the summer on their own," she added.

offs were held at Pacific High. Seniors Ron King and Tim Nicholson, and juniors Chris Galusha and Steve Kennedy participated. Some of the team members felt that they had a lot of talent, but they didn't work hard enough.

Hell Week (no pads) will start on Aug. 25, but there will be a weight training program over the summer.

All league teams hold their spring trainings either from May 12 to May 30, or from May 19 to June 6.

Ike track finishes 8-1, sends most into CIF

At the conclusion of the CBL track finals, Eisenhower led the league in participants qualifying for CIF.

By points, Ike won the overall meet. Eisenhower scored 99 points; San Geronimo, 53; and Palm Springs, 47.

Track participants had to place first, second or third in their events in order to qualify for the CIF meet in El Modena.

Alex Leon qualified in the 300 meter low-hurdles; Adrian Lash and Todd Funk, in the 110 meter high-hurdles; Leon and Darrel Allen, in the 200 meter dash;

Stanley Guinyard, Keith Thompson, Allen and Leon, in the mile relay; Funk in the pole vault; James Harris, long-jump; David Mango, shot-put; and David Turner, triple jump.

For the girls Jackie Sheffield qualified for the shot put and the 110 low hurdles; Jane Matthews and Yvette Valley, for the high jump; and Tracy Harvey, for the 2 mile.

"San Geronimo may have had the better athletes this year, but our athletes were more consistent," commented Michael Malody, EHS track coach.

"This was not one of our worst seasons," Malody added "8-1 is not a very poor record."

Only Joe knew what was coming

It was 6:15 to 5:59, in favor of Ike's basketball team. The setting: The San Geronimo High gym.

The ball will be passed in on the Spartan front court from Tony Fuller to Kevin O'Grady.

But what happened next no one ever expected. It was about the last thing anyone would have thought would happen.

About the only one who knew it was coming was the man who did it, Joe Hernandez.

Hernandez sparked perhaps the most important victory of the year when he moved in front of O'Grady, all alone, and stole the ball from him.

He proceeded to drive down the court in front of some several hundred shocked, screaming fans, which led to the most crucial deceit of the game.

Coach Dick Cardosi would later tell him that it was a superb individual effort. That it was.

Eagles capture CBL title from Indian forfeit

by Jim Long

Due to "unsatisfactory grades" of an unnamed player for the Palm Springs Indians, Eisenhower's boys basketball team was named co-champion of the CBL. It was announced last week.

The players' grades were discovered to be below CIF standards for an athlete to be eligible.

Ike's record was changed from 10 and 4 to 11 and 3, thereby tying the San Geronimo Spartans for the league crown.

San Geronimo and second-place Pacific were unaffected by the desert-resort school's forfeiting of six wins, since each team had defeated the Indians in both matchups.

According to Athletic Director Roger Reupert, Palm Springs did not discover the player's ineligibility until the end of February, when the season had finished.

CBL president school Fontana was contacted, and the ensuing action was taken.

For Ike, it is a second consecutive title, an accomplishment that coach Dick Cardosi had said in the pressroom was one of the more difficult things to do, considering the competitiveness of the league.

Palm Springs was forced to forfeit six of its wins. The game given to Ike was the 55-52 Ike homecoming upset on February 1.

The team finished third in the CBL with a record of 10-4. Loses were center Lori Dietsche, team captain was Kelly Knowles, most improved was Jacques Sheffield, and most inspirational was Odessa Clawson.

Seniors on the team were Mike Clark, Jeff Firestone, Mitch Harris, Jer Hernandez, Steve Holland, John Lambert and Gary Brooks, and Tony Vasquez.

Returning next year will be Darrell Harris, Anthony Green Paul Jarman and Kevin Garth.

As far as the girls basketball team went, Coach Jeff Perkins stated, "It was one frustrating season."

The team finished fourth in the CBL, tied with Palm Springs with a record of 7-8.

Most valuable player for the Eagles was center Lori Dietsche, team captain was Kelly Knowles, most improved was Jacques Sheffield, and most inspirational was Odessa Clawson.

Seniors on the team were Knowles, Clawson and Lisa Angularis. Other than those, the whole team will be coming back.

First year sophomores on the team were Tracy Glass, Kristin Nicholson and Jacque Sheffield.

Baseball comes in fourth

Out on the baseball diamond, the Eagles came in a disappointing fourth place but in turn had league top hitter, Darrell Coles, who ended the season with a .650 batting average.

Leaving for the Eagles will be their whole varsity pitching staff of Kerry Sorenson, Don Bonanno and Moses Juarez.

Four sophomores also earned a spot on the team roster: centerfielder Marvin Newton, rightfielder Kenny Davis, and secondbaseman Donny Mejia and Vince Avalla.

Knowles earns white letters

Kristen Nicholson

"Gentle Touch" (known as the notorious Kelly Knowles) has reached a goal very few high school girls ever reach. She has earned a white letter in three sports.

In volleyball she was a setter; in basketball she was a guard and averaged 10.2 points a game; and in softball she held a .412 batting average this season.

"Out of the last three years of watching volleyball players, Kelly is the best I've seen. The coach from the University of New Mexico said she is good enough to play in any large school division like UCLA or USC," stated Jeff Kremer, volleyball coach.

"I guess the three-year white letters say as much for Kelly as any person ever could," stated Jeff Perkins, basketball and softball coach.

Other accomplishments in her high school years was making "Who's who in America High School Students" for two years straight and being the director of athletics in student council.

She was in the top five finalists for Junior Darling last year. She is a reporter for the Eagle's Eye, she participates in the Sobobans and she also participated in a all-

Southern California Volleyball League called JNVA (Junior National Volleyball Association). Next year Kelly will be attending the University of New Mexico on a scholarship for volleyball.

Next year's Ike teams should be tough again

Girls volleyball at Ike has grown to a dominant stand in the CBL, thanks to the many hours of hard work put in by Jeff Kremer, head varsity volleyball coach.

"Next year's team should once again be tough like we as a key factor in the race of the CBL title," he said.

Kremer also stated that the team could be pretty well set by just the returning players from varsity last season and from the move up to players from the JV squad.

The overall record of this year's team was 12 wins and 3 losses, two of which came in the race of the CBL crown to Palm Springs. Kelly Knowles and Debbie Jarman are two standouts that came out of Kremer's program. Jarman, graduate of '79, went to Queta near San Luis Obispo, where she has already made a name for herself and Knowles will be attending the University of New Mexico next year.

As soon as the referee blew the whistle, everyone started cheering. Within the first period Ron Sample took him down and put him up for the pin. No sooner than the ref slapped the mat, the varsity and the JV team ran out on the mat and jumped on Sample. The score had been tied 33-33.

This was the results of a match against Corona. Corona won 97-122 weight classes and almost took 129 until Steve Gomez stopped them. The turning point and brought the score up to 33-27. The pressure was on Ron Sample to pin Corona's heavy weight to tie the score, and he did it.

was brought by Mike Roth who pinned his 156 opponent. Dave Wadleigh, Paul Reese and Danny Coates pinned their opponents but eight lettermen and six sophomores will be returning. Of the seven seniors, Dave Wadleigh was named MVP; and Danny Coates, Mike Roth and Paul Reese were named honorary captains.

Ike takes third
The Eisenhower softball team landed in a third place tie with San Bernardino but the Cardinals were chosen to go to the CIF playoffs over the Eagles. Kelly Knowles, Tracy Glass, and Maria Herrera made all-CBI while Alisa Adams, Darlene Taylor, and Terri Farmer made honorable mention. Graduating from Ike are Kelly Knowles, Darlene Taylor, Lisa Aguilera, and Kathy Magnolina.

Try something new, break mold, vote 'Honest John'

by Tom Martin

Since the late 1800's the small number of American people who vote choose their presidential candidates from among the nominees of either the Republican or Democratic parties. In other words, just about everyone has voted in a two-party manner.

Now one of the Republican Party challengers for the nomination, a fellow named John Anderson of Illinois, has withdrawn from the race and declared himself an Independent candidate.

Who is John Anderson? Congressman Anderson is a liberal republican (a rarity) who appeals to the wants and needs of the average citizen. He's not one of those big time politicians who promises the moon and then robs us blind. He's also not one of those politicians who can be bought by the big oil companies to do their dirty work and leave all us Americans out in the cold.

Even though Anderson voted Republican about every time in his twenty years in the House, he's more apt to favor change in government structure and doings and also return control of power to the people where it belongs.

Anderson desires to stop wasteful government spending by preferring tax incentives for small savers and homebuyers. Now even though Anderson has proposed a 50¢ a-gallon gas tax, he claims that it will bring in $60 billion a year, $46 billion of which would be shifted to the Social Security trust fund thus cutting the Social Security tax from 6.13 per cent to 3 per cent. This would conserve gas and in the long run you wouldn't lose any money as you would save hundreds of dollars in taxes.

Congressman Anderson also opposes the renewal of the peace time draft which is beneficial to most so we can avoid another catastrophe like Vietnam. He also opposed the funding of the MX missile, the B-1 bomber, the neutron bomb, and favors spending less government dollars on defense, not more.

American needs someone like John Anderson to run this country with honesty and integrity not seen in other politicians. So if you're sick and tired of voting Republican or Democratic, this November join the Independent bandwagon and support Anderson because he provides the best alternatives in a country in need of honesty and better alternatives.

Proposition Nine- too much too soon for California

by Mark Kaenel

Californians statewide will have an opportunity to cut their personal income tax by 50 per cent on June 3, this proposed amendment to California's state constitution, known as Proposition Nine, would be the second tax cut in California in two years. But Prop Nine will only devastate needed services in this state, especially public education, and would only benefit the wealthy and big business

Howard Jarvis, who's 1978 Proposition 13 cut property taxes by $6.9 billion, is the mastermind behind Prop Nine. It is difficult to determine what the long range effects this bill will have in California, but the immediate and near future results can be clearly seen.

The income tax is California's second largest source of revenue—second only to sales tax. Revenues from income taxes go into the general fund to support state departments and to aid local governments in a variety of ways. Since state income tax rates currently range from one to 11 per cent, Prop Nine will decrease that range to .5 to 5.5 per cent.

If Prop Nine passes, according to the Legislative Analyst's Office, there would be a $4.9 billion reduction in state income taxes, or 24 per cent of the general fund—the same fund which finances 86 per cent of all state expenditures. This would ultimately devastate local government dependencies on the state because the state will not have enough money to support local programs including fire and police protection, public libraries and especially public education. This would result in a drastic cutback in all of these areas in order to compensate for the lost income.

This all comes too soon because California is still trying to recover from our 1978 property tax cut. Over the past two years, schools have cut back on security, maintenance, sports and fine arts activities. If Prop Nine passes, all of these will probably be eliminated. Only 20 per cent of state revenues are actually spent at the state level, leaving 80 per cent for local governments—and 25 per cent of this will be eliminated if the bill passes.

Even if the taxpayers choose to take a cut in state taxes, the federal government will probably just take a bigger slice of our paychecks. The Analyst's Office also projects that if the surplus funds were used in 1980-81 "to cushion the impact," there would not be the funds available in 1981-82 which the measure will reduce taxes by an additional $4.2 billion.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown, Jr. says that Prop Nine "would enrich the state's richest residents and impair services for the poor, elderly, and handicapped and is a bad risk during (sic) a time when the economic prognosis is gloomy."

The effects of Proposition Nine will just be too much too soon. We should wait until Prop 13 affects are over with, and then initiate an income tax cut not as severe as Prop Nine, like a cut of about 15 or 20 per cent, instead of a steep 50 per cent. Prop Nine would hurt the poor, elderly, and those on a fixed income, and would devastate public schools with fewer teachers and larger classes.

So long , suckers..... hello, celerystick munchies

The school board has decided to eliminate all sugar-based foods from the school diet beginning next year. Here are opposing views of that decision:

Con

by Steve Janik

The administration should be praised for their concern with the students well-being but their lack of fore-sight in making such a decision will no doubt cause many problems on campus.

Ditching is already a problem and the need for a quick munchie will drive even more people off campus during class time. A Twinkie, bought on campus, can bring quick relief and hold a person till lunch.

Many clubs sell suckers as a profit-making enterprise. This too will be prohibited under the new regulation. You can't even quench your thirst after PE because the coke machines will be removed.

The administration should also be rebuked for not offering any substitutes for the loss of these products. It's this attitude that's typical of the current administration. They don't think things out.

Excessive sugar is not to be condoned, but the loss of revenue will hurt more people than an extra Snickers bar at lunch will. The Minute Shop will happily supply all the junk food you want.

This new regulation borders on restriction of trade and represses the free enterprise system. That's no way to run a high school. People would be better off if they were educated of the ill effects of excessive sugar rather than repressed with no explanation.

Pro

by Sandi Kruger

Can you believe it? The administration has finally done something beneficial for the students.

Before you start groaning and complaining, consider the good effects of this new "law." Number 1: This will save your parents the hassle of taking you to get your cavities filled every other month. Number 2: you might begin losing weight and gaining more dates. And Number 3: You will feel better about eating after school munchies because you ate a nourishing lunch.

Even if this doesn't seem too nice for those of you who can't control your sweet tooth, in the long-run it will probably do you some good. Obviously cutting down on all those "Snickers" and "Twinkies" will cut down on your zits and make you look more attractive.

Now you can thank the administration for leading you on the road to a happier and healthier life.

Students blinded in scholarship quest

by Kelly Knowles

One thing we've been taught all through school is the importance of always being prepared.

"Do your homework." "Study for your tests." And when we go out for a job interview we're told, "Find out all you can about the job, the company, the boss, before you go for the interview."

We're told again and again BE PREPARED! When important things happen you always seem to do better if you have prepared beforehand in some way or another.

However, now that we are seniors we are not given the chance to be prepared in any way for that most important opportunity of all — the scholarship interview!

You know nothing about the interview except that it is going to happen either that same day you get the call slip or the following day. You are given no information about who will be conducting the interview, what organization is offering the scholarship, what sort of information they are interested in, what sort of goal the organization has, or why you were selected for the interview.

With the rising costs of college tuitions, scholarships are more important than ever to most students. Whether it is for $25 or $400 or $1000 it means a great deal. It could even mean going to college for an education or not.

It is not fair that something so important as a chance at a college education is treated so "secretly." Seniors should have a chance to do more than just walk over to the nearest trash dispenser and throw their gum away and hope for the best to happen.
